Employment Picture Underwent Changes In Recent Years

NEW YORK — The structure of employment in manufacturing has been undergoing a significant change in recent years as between production and nonproduction workers, according to data compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The figures show that the rise in manufacturing employment in the period since the end of World War II has been dominated by the nonproduction classification, embracing a diversified group running from executives through research personnel to clerical staffs. Of the 1.6 million persons added to manufacturing payrolls between 1945 and 1956, 1.3 million, or four out of every five, have been in the nonproduction group.

As a result, the number of nonproduction workers rose to a record high of more than 3.7 million last year. This was the equivalent of 22 per cent of all persons employed in manufacturing, a proportion seldom approximated in the past. The number of production workers came to 13.2 million in 1956, and has fluctuated in a comparatively narrow range in recent years.

This shift in the composition of jobs in manufacturing is in line with the long-term trend of employment throughout the economy, with the white collar worker catching up with and passing the blue collar classification as the biggest single group in the working population.

Sun Glare Can Cause Accidents

URBANA, Ill. — Sometimes the sun can be an enemy. This is particularly true in the summer months when the sun's glare can be a decided safety threat to drivers, says O. L. Hogsett, extension safety specialist at the University of Illinois.

Glare from the sun, or reflections from cars and pavement, combined with high-speed will produce numerous accidents during the coming vacation season.

Many other accidents will result from "visual fatigue" caused by the strain of looking against sun glare.

The new styling of cars, with greater glass area, lavish chrome trims and light-reflecting colors, has greatly increased the hazard from glare. Another factor is the popularity of convertibles and sport cars, whose drivers have little protection from the sun.

Here are Hogsett's suggestions for reducing glare and decreasing danger:

Use a visor to protect your eyes from overhead glare.

Avoid driving at sunrise and sunset, when the rays of the sun hit directly into the windshield.

Prenatal Mortality Continues a Problem

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Prenatal mortality—death of infants before or soon after birth—continues to be a major medical problem, according to a recent study. In recent years prenatal deaths have averaged more than 135,000 a year in the United States. Approximately half of these are stillbirths, and the remaining half are babies dying within one week of birth.

Some progress has been made in reducing the prenatal mortality rate—it fell about one-third between 1940 and 1954—but the improvement has lagged far behind that for childbirth mortality among mothers, which decreased 86 percent in the same period.

The major factors contributing to the death toll in the prenatal period, the study shows, are lack of early and adequate prenatal care; twin and other plural births; puerperal toxemia; chronic and infectious diseases in the mother; and the use of inadequately trained midwives, a practice which is still fairly common in some sections of the country. Cesarean births, while quite safe for the mother, are still attended with high risk to the infant.

Heart Diseases Hurt American Industry

CHICAGO — Heart diseases rob business and industry of trained men during their most productive years. They deplete manpower of skilled employees and are responsible for a tremendous labor turnover and time loss.

Studies have indicated that these diseases are far more costly than strikes from a standpoint of lost productivity and are about ⅘ths as costly as on-the-job accidents.

New Fog Signal

NORWALK, Conn.—A signal time for motorboats has been developed by a Norwalk concern which says its timer automatically controls fog signals to conform to legal requirements. The company says the timer actuates a horn relay, or an electric air valve in a signal eyeye that fits regulations covering fog signals.

BIG PLASTIC ROOF

Concord, N. H.- A New Hampshire manufacturer recently announced that he had built a plastic roof large enough to cover three football fields. The roof will be shipped to Brussels and used for the United States pavilion at the 1958 Brussel's World Fair.

You can travel thousands of miles without finding better people than those who live next door.

FACTORY IMPORTS

At the end of 1956, 17,106,000 persons were on the rolls in the United States. At the end of July, this year, the number was 16,844,000, a reduction of 262,000 persons, or 1.5 per cent. The decrease in employment is due, in most instances, to reduced production cutbacks.

There are people in the world who judge everything by the size of the roll.

A. H. S. Homecoming Day

Let's All Support OUR Blue Hornets Team!!

Friday, September 27th.

GAME TIME: 8:00 P. M. PARADE: 2:00 P. M.

Here's a salute to the 1957 Football Team of the Appomattox High School. The Blue Hornets, under the leadership of Coach Gordon Bragg, are already off to a fine start, having won two opening games thus far in the schedule. Not many home games are left on the schedule, so the time to support the 1957 team by attendance at home games IS NOW!

Tomorrow, Friday, September 27, is the annual Homecoming Day at Appomattox High School. As customary, a big prgram of events has been planned. First big event will be the annual Homecoming Parade, beginning at 2:00 P. M. You will surely want to be in town and on the line of march to see the Band, the Cheerleaders, the Boy Scouts, Brownie Scouts, Girl Scouts, the various Clubs and class units in the Parade as they march by. Be there to give them a hand. They have worked long and hard to prepare beautiful floats and they merit having a crowd present to give approval!

Then at 8:00 P. M. at the Town Park, you will want to see the Homecoming Football Game, and crowning of the High School and the Elementary School King and Queen. There'll be lots of color and pep at Friday's night's event. Whether or not you are an Alumnus of A. H. S., you will want to come out and support the fine youth of your home community. One of the things we keep repeating in this series of messages is the theme of building your home community. Most of the time we bring you business messages, but the civic activities, the churches and the schools of a community need your support, too. Be proud when the home band goes by, when the home team make a score, when our home young people stage a successful event! And welcome the visiting team, too, for one of the direct results of athletics is the lesson of sportsmanship. Let's make this Friday a Big Day for our community.
